To whom it may concern,

I am pleased to confirm that Dr Vicky Shearman has been employed by the National Army Museum for several years as a freelance Historic Live Interpreter. The regularity with which she has been engaged to work here is, I think, a testament to our regard for her skills and ability. Her historical knowledge is exemplary: her manner of delivery is professional and engaging. The attention to detail evident in her research is matched by the accuracy of her period attire and props. She is clearly passionate about her subject, but at the same time never loses sight of the central role of the visitor's experience.

Dr Shearman has also developed and delivered specialist presentations and lectures on the history of medicine and the role of women in society as part of our Public and Schools Programming.
